has BOUDIN!

bou·din
[boo-dan]

Q: How do I pronounce it?

A: This can be a tricky one for non-natives.

From the spelling, it may seem correct to pronounce it “boodin”, but the proper pronunciation is “boodan” or “boodeh.” If this seems too intimidating, just ask for a “link,” and you’ll be okay.

Q: Why is boudin so good?

A: Because it's an authentic Louisiana product with varying recipes and ingredients from producer to producer.

Revvving up for Boudin!

The best way to enjoy this meat and rice treat is to fill a vehicle with gas, get some napkins and follow your nose to mom & pop meat markets and grocery stores on the Boudin Trail throughout Southwest Louisiana.

The Missing Boudin Link?

Boudin could be called the spiced-hybrid cousin of beef or pork sausage. It's a food item that melds the best from Cajun, German and Creole culinary traditions and traces its history back to Canada by way of France.

Boudin—Anytime of the day! Matters not.

Considered a staple snack in the southern regions of the Bayou State, boudin is made of varying amounts of pork meat, liver, rice, onions, parsley and dry seasonings like salt, red pepper, black pepper and garlic powder. Bought by the pound, boudin is Southwest Louisiana's favorite finger food. It's perfect for breakfast, lunch, dinner, or anytime in between.

Smoked Meats

Smoked meats are called so because they spend time in the fire box with some oak, hickory or pecan wood and are packed full of flavor. Traditionally prepared in Southwest Louisiana's cast-iron pots, smoked meats include sausage, turkey legs, wings, tasso and even boudin. Most boudin shops have a smokehouse in the back where they prepare these meats.

BOUDIN TYPES!

Boudin blanc—light colored boudin

Crawfish boudin—made with cooked crawfish tails and rice

Shrimp boudin—made with cooked shrimp and rice

Alligator boudin—made with cooked alligator meat and rice

Hot boudin—extra spicy boudin, make sure you buy a cold drink

Mild boudin—spices are pleasant and won't leave a burn, no cold drink needed

Smoked boudin—boudin links that have been stuffed and then placed in a smokehouse to infuse with flavor

Q: How do I cook it?

A: There are several methods of cooking boudin.

Method One

Put the links in a pot of boiling water for about five minutes.

Method Two

Heat them on a barbecue pit to add a smoked flavor and a crispy casing.

Method Three

Steam the links in a rice cooker or slow cooker until heated through.

Method Four

Microwave the links.

Method Five

Heat the boudin in a 300 degree oven. This will also result in a crispy casing.

Q: Is it raw?

A: Locally sold boudin is pre-cooked and should just be heated through.
